ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of storing usage information in an ink jet printer includes storing low priority usage information in a first memory field. First high priority usage information is stored in a second memory field. Second high priority usage information is stored in a third memory field. The second high priority usage information is substantially identical to the first high priority usage information.